

Biographies

Brian Bonhomme is Professor of Russian and Environmental History at Youngstown State University, Ohio. He holds a PhD in Modern European History from the City University of New York and focuses on environmental and geographical themes in Russian and Soviet history. His published work treats topics ranging from forest management, bird conservation, and animal rights to geographical expeditions. He recently published Russian Exploration: From Siberia to Space (McFarland, 2012).

Juan Diego Pérez Cebada, PhD in History (University of Seville, 1997) and Associate Professor at the University of Huelva (2004), has been Visiting Researcher at the Universities of Montana (three semesters, courses 1996-97, 1997-1998 and 1998-1999), Ottawa (course 2006-2007), British Columbia (course 2007-2008), Pierre Mendes-France (course 2008-2009) and Reading (course 2010-2011). His research centers around two lines: land property rights and mining pollution history. He is a member of two research groups: “La minería y su contribución al desarrollo económico, social y territorial de España. 1700-2000”, (HAR2010-21941-C03-03, Spanish Ministry of Science and Innovation) and “Prevencción de riesgos laborales” (SEJ-523, Government of Andalucía). He has received several grants and awards, among them five Individual Mobility Grant (University of Huelva and Andalusian Government), and a grant by the Canadian Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Faculty Research Award). He is a member of the Editorial Board of Historia Actual, and the author of more than forty book chapters and articles in scientific journals (published in Spanish, English and Catalan) such as Revista de Historia Industrial (1999), Historia Agraria (2000), Historia Actual (2003), Ecología Política (2005), Recerques (2008), Boletín Geográfico y Minero (2009), etc., and in books such as Naturaleza transformada. Estudios de historia ambiental en España (Barcelona, Icaria, 2001), Proceedings of II Congress of European Society for Environmental History (Charles University, Praga, 2003), Minería y desarrollo económico en perspectiva histórica (Síntesis, Madrid, 2006), Grandes Empresarios Andaluces (Lid Editorial, Madrid, 2011). He has also published two books on agrarian and environmental history (San José del Valle: de desierto a colonia agrícola, Diputación de Cádiz, Cádiz, 1998; Minería y medio ambiente (en perspectiva histórica), Universidad de Huelva, Huelva, 2001). He is currently preparing the publication of his last book, Tierra devastada: Historia de la contaminación minera.

Randall Dills is an Assistant Professor of History at the University of Louisville in Louisville, Kentucky. Dills completed a PhD in Russian History at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign in 2010, where a Fulbright-Hays

DDRA award supported his work. He is a past editorial assistant at Slavic Review and currently a book review editor at H-Russia. His research focuses on urban environments of the Russian Empire, especially St. Petersburg. An article on the 1824 Petersburg flood is forthcoming in the Journal of Urban History. He is completing a book length eco-biography of the river Neva in St. Petersburg.

Warwick Frost is an Associate Professor in Tourism and coordinator of the Events programs at La Trobe University in Melbourne, Australia. His research interests include heritage, events, regional development, nature-based attractions and the interaction between media, popular culture and tourism. Warwick has published in journals such as Annals of Tourism Research, Tourism Management and the International Journal of Heritage Research. He has edited two books: Zoos and Tourism (Channel View, 2011) and Tourism and National Parks (with C.M. Hall, Routledge, 2009) and has co-written with Jennifer Laing Books and Travel: Inspiration, Quests and Transformation (Channel View, Bristol-Buffalo-Toronto 2012). He is one of the founding convenors of the biennial International Tourism and Media Conferences, and a co-editor of the Routledge Advances in Events Research series.

Andrew C. Isenberg is Professor of History at Temple University in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He is the author of The Destruction of the Bison: An Environmental History, 1750-1920 (Cambridge University Press, 2000); Mining California: An Ecological History (Hill and Wang, 2005); and the editor of The Nature of Cities: Culture, Landscape, and Urban Space (University of Rochester Press, 2006) and the forthcoming Oxford Handbook of Environmental History.

Linda L. Ivey is currently an Associate Professor and Chair of the History Department at California State University, East Bay. She specializes in environmental history, looking at the intersections of this field with cultural, ethnic and labor history. She completed her doctoral work at Georgetown University in 2003, researching the ecological and social consequences of capitalist agriculture on the Central Coast of California in the early 20th century, and is currently working on the relationship between labor and sustainability in the organic agriculture movement of the latter 20th century. She is the author of "Ethnicity in the Land: Lost Stories in California Agriculture" which appeared in Agricultural History in 2007, and has published additional pieces in Environmental History and Reviews in American History. Professor Ivey is the coordinator of the Public History program at CSU East Bay and works with local museums and historical institutions to offer student internships and link student work to public venues. She teaches courses in the history of California and the US West, as well as in environmental, immigration, and public history.

Martin Kalb is a full-time lecturer at Northern Arizona University, where he teaches European and World history. He earned his MA from the University of Erlangen-Nuremberg in Germany in 2007, and his PhD from Northern Arizona University in 2011. His doctoral thesis explored social constructions of young people in Munich between 1942 and 1969 and underlines his interest in everyday life (Alltagsgeschichte). Recent publications include an article on male delinquents in the Journal of the History of Childhood and Youth (2013) and a discussion of environmental justice in West-Germany in Global Environment (2012). Current research projects continue to be framed by a larger interest in and concern for a history from below.

Vimbai C. Kwashirai is a Senior Research Fellow of the Gerda Henkel Foundation in Germany. His research straddles the themes of environment, political violence and poverty in Africa. He is on the editorial board of Global Environment. Regarding global environments, he is the editor of two special volumes focusing on the environmental histories of continents. He is the author of: Conservationism in Zimbabwe; 1850-1950 (Nova, 2009); Zimbabwe: Poverty, Poverty and Poverty (Nova, 2010); and Green Colonialism in Zimbabwe; 1890-1980 (Cambria Press, 2009). He has also published: "Dilemmas in Conservationism in Colonial Zimbabwe 1890", in Conservation and Society, 4, 4, 2006, pp. 541-561; "Poverty in the Gwai Forest Reserve of Zimbabwe c.1880-1953", in Global Environment, 1, 2008, pp. 146-175 and "Ecological and Poverty Impacts of Zimbabwe's Land Struggle: 1980-2010", in Global Environment, 3, 2009, pp. 222-253.

Jennifer Laing is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Marketing, Tourism and Hospitality at La Trobe University, Australia. Her research interests include travel narratives, the role of events in society, heritage tourism, gastronomy and nature-based tourism. Jennifer is a co-editor of the Routledge Advances in Events Research series and a member of the editorial boards of Journal of Travel Research, Tourism Analysis and Tourism Review International. She has co-written two books with Warwick Frost, Books and Travel: Inspiration, Quests and Transformation (Channel View: 2012) and Commemorative Events: Memory, Identities, Conflict (Routledge, 2013).

Lajos RÁCZ is professor of the Szeged University (Hungary), his main research areas are climate and environmental history. He pursued studies at the École des Hautes Études en Science Sociales in Paris, where his researches were directed by Bernard Lepetit and Jean-Yves Grenier. In the 1990s RÁCZ received scholarships to the Historical Institute of Bern University where he worked under the direction of Christian Pfister. RÁCZ performed climate history researches at the Masaryk University (Brno) together with Rudolf Brázdil and Petr Dobrovolný. In 2003 and 2004 he received scholarship to the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Studies with support of Petra van Dam. In 2010 and 2011 RÁCZ was researching in Munich at the Rachel Carson Center. Lajos RÁCZ is a specialist of the climate history of the Carpathian Basin during the Early Modern and Modern Times. He reconstructed the climate history of Hungary based on documentary sources from 1500 to 1900. The other main of RÁCZ's interest is the study of the nature environmental crises of the Carpathian Basin. He obtained PhD title in 1995, and the title of doctorat of Hungarian Academy of Sciences in 2004. Rác was a founding member of the European Society for Environmental History (2001) and the International Society for Historical Climatology (2012), and he was the regional representative of ESEH between 2001 and 2009.

András Vadas is PhD-candidate at the Eötvös Loránd University (Budapest, Hungary) and at the Central European University (Budapest, Hungary). He studied at the Eötvös Loránd University from where he earned a Masters degree in history and geography in 2009. He received a Masters degree the Medieval Studies Program of the Central European University in 2010. Vadas studied in Paris (2008) at the École des Hautes Études en Science Sociales and carried out research in Munich (2010) at the Rachel Carson Center and in Vienna (2011) at the Vienna University. Vadas is preparing a PhD dissertation on the early modern Hungarian floods with special regard to the problem of the interaction of the political situation and the environment. Apart from the climate and environmental history of the late medieval and early modern period Vadas studies the late medieval water use patterns and legal customs regarding water manipulation in the Hungarian Kingdom. Vadas is a member of the ESEH since 2008.

Guus van Westen is a lecturer and researcher with International Development Studies at Utrecht University, and deputy chair of LANDac, a network of several Dutch organisations and their Southern partners that bring together researchers, policy makers and development practitioners on issues of land rights (www.landgovernance.org). His main research interest is private sector development, specifically the role of responsible business in local development. Recent publications include: Nguyen Quang Phuc, A.C.M. van Westen, Annelies Zoomers, “Agricultural Land for Urban Development: The Process of Land Conversion in Central Vietnam”, in Habitat International, 41, 1, 2014, pp. 1-7. (Available online : <http://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S0197397513000568>); Westen, Guus van, G. Betsema, I. Cottyn, F. van Noorloos, M. McLinden Nuijen, J. Schapendonk and A. Zoomers (2012): Corporate Social Responsibility in the Agro-food sector. The Contribution of Dutch and European Agro-Entrepreneurs to Sustainable Local Development and Food Security in Africa, MVO Nederland, Utrecht 2013. (Available on-line: <http://www.landgovernance.org/proceeding/csr-agro-food-sector>); Pham, Ty Huu, A.C.M. van Westen, A. Zoomers (2013), “Compensation and Resettlement Policies after Compulsory Land Acquisition for Hydropower Development in Vietnam: Policy and Practice”, in Land, 2, 4, 2013, pp. 678-704. (Available online: <http://www.mdpi.com/2073-445X/2/4/678>).

Annelies Zoomers is Professor of International Development Studies at Utrecht University and chair of LANDac, the Netherlands Academy on Land Governance (www.landgovernance.org). After finishing her PhD in 1988, she worked on long and short-term consulting assignments for various organizations (Worldbank, IFAD, ILO etc.) in Latin America, Africa and Asia. Between 1995 and 2007, she was Associate Professor at the Centre for Latin American Research and Documentation (Amsterdam) and Professor of International Migration (Radboud University, Nijmegen). She has published extensively about sustainable livelihoods; land reform and the global land rush; and international migration and development. Her recent publications include: The Global Land Grab: Beyond the Hype (forthcoming 2014, with Mayke Kaag, ZED books, London). “A Critical Review of the Policy Debate on Large Scale Land Acquisition: Fighting the Symptoms or Killing the Heart?”, in Africa for Sale? Positioning the State, Land and Society in Foreign Large-Scale Land Acquisitions in Africa, Sandra J.T.M. Evers et al. (eds), Brill, Leiden 2013; “Translocal Development, Development Corridors and Development Chains”, in International Development Planning Review, 33, 4, 2011, pp. 377-509 (with Guus van Westen); “Globalization and the Foreignization of Space: The Seven Processes Driving the Current Global Land Grab”, in Journal of Peasant Studies, 37, 2, 2010, pp. 429-447.